PREFACE.

In a new edition of my friend Mr. Cobham's work the idea has been to render it more convenient for reference and to bring the list as much up to date as possible. This new edition will include only such matter of a periodical kind as is usually bound up and preserved in the form of books, i.e. periodicals of a scientific description; proceedings of learned societies, belles-lettres, etc.

The completeness of a bibliography must depend on circumstances. A catalogue which goes back to the invention of printing in the XVth century and embraces all the known literary languages of the world, must present difficulties in attainment even to the most sanguine of compilers; hence the late Mr. C. D. Cobham wisely entitled his work an attempt.

Works of a merely ephemeral or newspaper kind may have crept into the bibliography of Mr. Cobham, but the list should be confined as much as possible to the more permanent literature which has developed in the form of books.

Amongst those who have assisted in compiling this new edition of "Cobham's Bibliography" must be mentioned His Excellency Sir Ronald Storrs, Mr. Luca Z. Pierides, Dr. A. H. Unwin, and the numerous authorities of European libraries to whom the first proof sheets were submitted for criticism and additions.

A certain difficulty arises in bringing so many contributions in different languages to a general standard of expression. Some of them were sent me not only abbreviated to an extreme, but also mere names without any particulars at all. Consultation of ancient authorities is difficult in a place like Cyprus—it has therefore been thought best to treat the Bibliography as a catalogue without a very precise or detailed character so that the different titles may appear with as much uniformity as circumstances permit. These considerations apply more especially to the extracts from periodical literature, the too voluminous descriptions of certain items have been to some extent curtailed in order to harmonise with the rest.

Here it must be noted that "Folklore" is in a particular way excluded from this Bibliography. The very interesting collection of poems by the village rhapsodists so characteristic of the Romaic Levant ever since the use of printing, demand special study and a particular bibliography which will doubtless be given to them in course of time. Books for elementary education and matters connected with private commercial affairs, club rules, etc., are also, as a general rule, excluded.

May, 1928.
